CATASTROPHE IN THE MISSISSIPPI ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON

ALL VICTIMS FROM TWIN CITIES. LAUNCH SANK NEAR SOUTH ST. PAUL

NO EXPLOSION, BOAT BELIEVED TO HAVE RUN FOUL OF SOME OBSTRUCTION

(By United Press)
St. Paul, Aug. 20.—Ten persons lost their lives here Sunday afternoon when a gasoline launch sank in the Mississippi river near South St. Paul.

All of the victims were from the Twin Cities.

A fisherman who was on the river in a rowboat some distance away is the only person who saw the accident. According to his story, the boat was proceeding up stream and had reached a point near the Terminal Packing plant at Newport when there was a sudden outcry from the passengers.

Leap Screaming Into Water
The men, women and children leaped screaming into the water. There was no explosion, and officials have not yet been able to determine the cause of the accident.

Coroner W. H. Meeker was of the opinion that the boat had run afoul of some obstruction below the surface of the water. There is a wing dam near the spot where the boat capsized.

The river is extremely low, and a rock or submerged log may have struck the bottom of the launch.

Only One Body Recovered
Only one body had been recovered at an early hour this morning. It was that of Mrs. Paul Martinelli. Her body was taken from the river by John McCoy, fisherman, who saw what appeared to be part of a woman's dress floating on the surface. On approaching it he found it to be the body of Mrs. Martinelli.

The river is extremely swift near where the boat was lost, and the remaining victims may have been carried far down stream by the undercurrent.

The dead:

Nicholas Martinelli, 40, St. Paul.
Vincent Martinelli, 45, St. Paul.
Frank Gaultiere, 10, St. Paul.
Robert Gaultiere.
Mrs. Eliza Martinelli, 34, South St. Paul.

Andrew Martinelli, 25, St. Paul.
Miss Pauline Martinelli, St. Paul.

Robert Martinelli, 6, St. Paul.
Alfred Martinelli, 4, St. Paul.
Margaret Mahn, 16, Minneapolis, sister of Mrs. Andrew Martinelli.

Andrew Martinelli was president of the Auto-Marine Service company, Minneapolis, and was recognized as an expert boat-builder. The boat in which he and his family met death had been recently completed, and was making its third trip from the dock.

Construction May Have Been Faulty

It was suggested by some officials Sunday night that there might have been some fault in the construction of the launch, and that the heavy and powerful motor may have fallen through the bottom of the boat, tearing open a wide gap through which the water rushed.

Father Mourns Loss of Relatives

St. Paul, Aug. 20.—"Why couldn't it have been me instead? I could have gone without regret, but they were young; they still had their lives to live."

A grim old personage, father of the two boys drowned with three of his brothers and five other relatives late yesterday at Pine Bend when their boat sank, sat in his little home today and wept.

One of the boys was ten and the other twenty years old. The father is Anthony Gaultiere.

"I shall hate Pine Bend the rest of my days," said the mother of the dead boys. "We have picnicked at that place for many years, and to think that the boys drowned there."

FOUR SENTENCED IN NEW POLICE WAR ON RIVER DIST. DRINK PLACES

(By United Press)
Minneapolis, Aug. 20.—In a new declaration of war on barmaids employed in soft drink places in the river district, Detective Thomas P. Gleason, head of the purity squad, last night said further arrests would follow four made, and that he had assurances that straight workhouse terms would be imposed whenever law violation was proved.

Four barmaids charged with selling soft drinks without a license, were given 30 day workhouse terms by Municipal Judge Levi Hall.

One girl explained that she was "selling cigarettes" at 25 cents a package, but raiders testified that they found less than one carton of cigarettes in the store.

"It appears," Judge Hall said, "that the cigarette sale is not very extensive—not enough, in fact, to warrant operating the place."

"Severe sentences will be meted out to this type of law violator."

RULE BY LASH IS FOUGHT IN SOUTH BY GOVERNMENT

3 STATES TO STAMP OUT TYRANNY ENFORCING EDICTS BY WHIP, TAR POT, ETC.

PUNISHMENT INFLICTED NOT A MILD SPANKING, BUT ONE NEARLY FATAL

(By United Press)

Rule by the lash in sections of the South was fought today by the forces of visible, orderly, governmental procedure.

Regularly constituted authorities in three states concentrated all possible power to stamp out the invisible government which enforces its edicts with the "blacksnake," the tarpot and feathers.

Operation of flogging bands in several cities had become so bold and promiscuous that certain classes of people were afraid to venture from their homes after dark. The whippers were apt to pick anyone who had gained their enemy.

Punishment was not a mild spanking. Victims of the invisible government were flogged to the point where many were in serious danger of death. Great wounds were opened in their backs by the curling ends of whips, frequently leaded. A wet rope also has been used in many instances.

In Macon, Ga., authorities believed they had broken up a gang which had terrorized that city for months with the arrest of three persons alleged to have been caught in the act of whipping negroes.

Texas rangers on duty in Port Arthur and Amarillo, where recent floggings occurred, had apparently flogged flogging bands in those cities to put an end to their parties for the time being at least.

Guardsmen enforcing martial law in Tulsa met opposition from civilians. Military officials said they were prepared to file charges of perjury against two men alleged to have given false testimony in investigations into floggings.

BARBER KIDNAPED BY MASKED BAND

Eu Galtie, Fla., Aug. 20.—Hugh Davis, local barber, was taken from a deputy sheriff and spirited away by a masked band in an automobile. The barber had been arrested on a charge of non-support of his wife.

A large crowd witnessed the kidnapping.

NEGRO FLOGGED WITH OAK CLUB

Orlando, Fla., Aug. 20.—Four men were arrested today, following the kidnapping and beating of Caesar Nealons, negro, of New Smyrna. Authorities said the negro was beaten because he gave police of New Smyrna information about the men. An oak club was used for the flogging.

CLASH BETWEEN CIVILIANS, GUARDSMEN

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 20.—Official reports of a clash between civilians and guardsmen here were made public today by military officers enforcing martial law here. The guard engaged in a running revolver battle during the night with a small band of marauders who attempted to enter the armory where prisoners are held for questioning. Many shots were exchanged without effect.

The military also reported that a young girl had been attacked by civilians near the army camp. She was left lying semi-conscious near the camp. Military authorities believed it was a plot to arouse public anger against the troops.

MEXICAN-AMERICAN RELATIONS IMPROVED

(By United Press)

Washington, Aug. 20.—American recognition of the Obregon government and resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico will be recommended to President Coolidge and Secretary of State Hughes by the American commissioners in the recent so-called recognition conference at Mexico City, it was declared today.

The two American commissioners, Charles B. Warren and John Barton Payne, arrived today from Mexico City and were to confer with Secretary Hughes. After the conference at the state department they are expected to go to the White House to confer with the president.

Satisfactory Agreement Reached

Washington, Aug. 20.—After a conference of an hour and a half between Hughes and the two commissioners, Warren told newspaper men that the agreement reached in Mexico City was satisfactory to both the Mexican government and the commissioners, and that he hoped it would be satisfactory to President Coolidge and Hughes.

Warren said, however, of course it was a question to be decided finally by the president. He said a conference probably would be arranged for some time later at the day between Hughes and the commissioners and President Coolidge. Warren expects to be in Washington for some days for conferences with the government here.

SUES FOR 30 CENTS LIBEL DAMAGES

FORMER SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE IN LITIGATION WITH SENATOR BROOKHART

(By United Press)

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 20.—E. C. Meredith, secretary of agriculture in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, announced through attorneys that he will sue Senator Smith W. Brookhart for 30 cents libel and damages.

Brookhart charged recently in a speech that Meredith participated in the deflation of farm prices, and the former secretary is determined to make the Iowa senator submit his proof, the attorneys said.

Brookhart Laughs at Suit

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 20.—E. C. Meredith, Woodrow Wilson's secretary of agriculture, was laughed at by Senator Smith W. Brookhart today when the latter was informed that Meredith will sue him for 30 cents libel and damages.

The former cabinet officer, on a vacation in Bemidji, Minn., announced through his attorneys that he would bring the suit because Brookhart charged in a recent speech that Meredith, while secretary of agriculture, dabbled "in the Wall Street game" and started a panic in farm prices.

Brookhart said he would demand trial of the case before a jury of farmers.

"If Meredith files suit in the county, I will have it transferred to Washington county and will let the farmers decide it."

"I can pay the 30 cents," the junior senator laughingly declared. "I am not afraid of Mr. Meredith's charges."

Brookhart refused to comment on the truth of the charges, declaring the senator's charges are only worth 30 cents.

He is willing to accept Meredith's challenge to submit the case to farmers for them to decide.

"There is nothing to Brookhart's charge. I believe it to be a real service to show the public that Brookhart makes many wild and extravagant statements without any base in fact."

"The public will have an opportunity to see how he can prove many of his mouthings."

Few people gave credit to Brookhart's assertion, Meredith said, explaining the affair.

Brookhart "assailed my integrity and my loyalty to the farmers," Meredith said.

The charges against the former secretary were made by Brookhart at a picnic at Radcliffe, Iowa.

INMATES VANISH FROM A TRUANT SCHOOL, CHICAGO

EIGHTEEN MISSING FROM CHICAGO PARENTAL SCHOOL IN LAST FEW YEARS

IN EACH CASE THE DISAPPEARANCE HAS BEEN OF MYSTERIOUS NATURE

(By United Press)
Chicago, Aug. 20.—Eighteen youthful inmates have vanished from the Chicago Parental (truant) school in the last few years, it was charged by Eugene McGarry of the state attorney's office when hearings on charges against the institution were resumed today.

In each case the disappearance has been of a mysterious nature, McGarry said. Neither authorities nor parents have heard from the boys since they were listed as "missing."

The investigation is in the form of habeas corpus hearings before Judge Michael McKinley for release in the matter.

MEXICAN-AMERICAN RELATIONS IMPROVED

(By United Press)
Washington, Aug. 20.—American recognition of the Obregon government and resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico will be recommended to President Coolidge and Secretary of State Hughes by the American commissioners in the recent so-called recognition conference at Mexico City, it was declared today.

The two American commissioners, Charles B. Warren and John Barton Payne, arrived today from Mexico City and were to confer with Secretary Hughes. After the conference at the state department they are expected to go to the White House to confer with the president.

Satisfactory Agreement Reached

Washington, Aug. 20.—After a conference of an hour and a half between Hughes and the two commissioners, Warren told newspaper men that the agreement reached in Mexico City was satisfactory to both the Mexican government and the commissioners, and that he hoped it would be satisfactory to President Coolidge and Hughes.

Warren said, however, of course it was a question to be decided finally by the president. He said a conference probably would be arranged for some time later in the day between Hughes and the commissioners and President Coolidge. Warren expects to be in Washington for some days for conferences with the government here.

The Dakotan sailed from Seattle for the Atlantic coast August 4, and was on her way to the Panama Canal when crashed ashore.

SUES FOR 30 CENTS LIBEL DAMAGES

FORMER SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE IN LITIGATION WITH SENATOR BROOKHART

(By United Press)
Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 20.—E. T. Meredith, secretary of agriculture in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, announced through attorneys that he will sue Senator Smith W. Brookhart for 3 cents libel and damages.

Brookhart charged recently in a speech that Meredith participated in the deflation of farm prices, and the former secretary is determined to make the Iowa senator submit his proof, the attorneys said.

Brookhart Laughs at Suit

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 20.—E. T. Meredith, Woodrow Wilson's secretary of agriculture, was laughed at by Senator Smith W. Brookhart today when the latter was informed that Meredith will sue him for 30 cents libel and damages.

The former cabinet officer, on a vacation in Bemidji, Minn., announced through his attorneys that he would bring the suit because Brookhart charged in a recent speech that Meredith, while secretary of agriculture, dabbled "in the Wall Street game" and started a panic in farm prices.

Brookhart said he would demand trial of the case before a jury of farmers.

"If Meredith files suit in the county, I will have it transferred to Washington county and will let the farmers decide it."

"I can pay the 30 cents," the junior senator laughingly declared. "I am not afraid of Mr. Meredith's charges."

Brookhart refused to comment on the truth of the charges, declaring the senator's charges are only worth 30 cents.

He is willing to accept Meredith's challenge to submit the case to farmers for them to decide.

"There is nothing to Brookhart's charge. I believe it to be a real service to show the public that Brookhart makes many wild and extravagant statements without any base in fact."

"The public will have an opportunity to see how he can prove many of his mouthings."

Few people gave credit to Brookhart's assertion, Meredith said, explaining the affair.

Brookhart "assailed my integrity and my loyalty to the farmers," Meredith said.

The charges against the former secretary were made by Brookhart at a picnic at Radcliffe, Iowa.

The union men, lead by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, will endeavor to force a settlement of the wage question before taking up the checkoff and other disputed points.

A twenty percent increase for coal cutters and a straight $2 a day raise for laborers is demanded.

HIGHWAYS CONTINUE IN GOOD CONDITION

St. Paul, Aug. 20.—Minnesota trunk highways—7,000 miles of so-called Babcock roads marked with official numbers on yellow stars—continue in the best condition of this season, as reported today by the state highway department.

Reports from sixteen district maintenance superintendents, on which the bulletin is based, indicate that patrolmen and other maintenance forces are making a good showing toward keeping trunk routes smooth under record-breaking traffic. The Belle Plaine-Minneapolis section of F. H. No. 5 was marked down to fair from good, due to the pound of heavy travel. Unpaved sections of No. 1—the St. Paul-Duluth road—are improved with special expenditures. Minneapolis west, Nos. 10 and 12 also are receiving special maintenance attention.

The new condition bulletin, as it refers to roads in the Brainerd Lake Region:

AMUSEMENTS

"You Can't Fool Your Wife" Great

Voted great by a capacity audience, "You Can't Fool Your Wife," a Paramount picture production by George Melford, was presented with applause at the Lyceum Theatre yesterday. Independent of its superiority as a picture, the various characters are portrayed by noted screen artists, those featured being Leatrice Joy, Lewis Stone, Nita Naldi and Pauline Garon. This is a domestic drama of superlative merit and every scene has a punch of its own. The story is one of absorbing interest and its appeal is undeniable. The supporting players are quite convincing in their portrayals. It will be shown for the last time tonight.

Western Rodeo in New W. S. Hart Picture

Those who have not seen a real rodeo, or congress of wild riders and ropers of the west, will have the opportunity of doing so when "O'Malley of the Mounted," William S. Hart's Paramount production comes to the Lyceum Theatre Tuesday, one day only.

Disguised as a cowboy, seeking a man killer, he crosses the border into the United States, and because he knows that the man who did the deed is a wonderful rider, looks for him at the rodeo which is being held in the cow town surrounded by craggy steep.

He finds him and follows him into the outlaws' camp—the rest must be left to thrill the spectators; suffice that they will find an amazing situation handled with wonderful skill in this story which is an original by

Mr. Hart, adapted and directed by Lambert Hillyer.

It is an inspiring picture—one to set the blood tingling. Eva Novak is leading woman and there is a fine cast of players, with one of the most effective villains imaginable.

ON SILENT GUARD

Explanation of Mysterious Figure in Grecian Cave.

If Surmise Is Correct, Grim Custodian of Treasure Was Most Cunningly Devised.

Always the Thracian peasant is stirred to tell you stories of caves. I once employed a queer man-of-all-trades as a foreman of excavation. He was a Thracian Greek from Varna, on the Black sea, whence he had been driven by Bulgarians into Greece. He had mostly been a sailor on the Pontic coasts, but he had been to many lands and knew Asia Minor well.

"I could tell you a queer story," he said to me one evening in true sailor fashion, "that a farmer once told me in a village near Smyrna." He lit his pipe (only sailors among Greeks take to pipes), and started his story after we had finished our digging and were taking our evening coffee by our tents. "This farmer went once far inland into the hills. He found the entrance to a deep cave and, with a certain hesitation, went in. He found himself in a well-cut tunnel that led straight into the rock. After a time he turned a corner and saw a red glimmer of flame.

"Greatly alarmed, he moved on very quietly and cautiously. Again he rounded a bend and saw, at the end of a straight stretch a blaze of fire coming out from a natural vent in the rock. He stopped motionless, for there in front of the flame, was seated the figure of a man perfectly still. He crept on cautiously. Suddenly, as he advanced, the figure rose, rigidly, to its feet, swung round and faced him. He could not see its face, for it was against the light. He took one more nervous step forward and, as he did so, the rigid figure lifted in both its hands a huge hammer, still facing him. He stepped back, and as he did so the figure lowered the hammer. He stepped back one more step, and the figure sat down again. Less nervous, he advanced again.

"As he did so the figure rose once more, silent and rigid. He made one more step, and it lifted its hammer menacingly once more. Again he withdrew, and the figure lowered its hammer and sat down. Now he was thoroughly alarmed and made his way quickly out of the tunnel."

"Did he find out who the man was?" I asked.

"No," replied my sailorman, "he did not, neither did he try. But my opinion is," he continued, "that there was a vast treasure buried in that cave, and the owner had made a mechanical figure which worked automatically by some mechanism that operated from the floor. As you went in you trod upon the levers and the figure rose to seize you. You went further, and it lifted its hammer. If that farmer had taken one step more he would have been a dead man. The fire was a natural vent of gas that was never quenched. There are many such away back in Asia Minor and Persia." He paused, as ancient mariners always pause after they have reached their finest effect: "You would have liked to excavate that cave," he said, simply.

I often wonder what element of truth was at the bottom of that story. All one can be certain of is that the Smyrniot farmer left the cavern in a very great fright. But who is not really afraid of caverns in his inmost heart? We call it "caution"; we are afraid lest the roof fall in and bury us, lest we disappear down some unexpected hole. Really, it is the inborn terror of the dark that frightens us, perhaps itself born of the danger that beset primitive man in caves—cave lions, cave bears, or some last remnant of an earlier, more savage strain of man, the prototype of the ogre of the fairy story.—Exchange.

NO METHOD FOR LONGEVITY

Impossible to Formulate Rule by Which Man May Prolong Stay on Earth.

Medical theories for the advancement of longevity remain only theories. The lengthening of the span of life may be worked out to a mathematical nicety on paper, but in practice it proves utterly impractical. Outside influences have an unerring and hostile attraction to the best-laid plans—and instead of attaining the age of John Shell the average man dies at 54.3 years.

The latest of the longevity theorists is Dr. Leonard Williams of London, who declares that men should live to be 140 years old. He says we are not martyrs to disease but victims of folly, and he points out that the trouble lies in a "low level of mediocrity." All of which may be interpreted as meaning that the average person does not take the same care of himself as he does of his motor car or his live stock.

There is much in what Doctor Williams says, though it hardly could be termed novel. Modern medicine is nothing if it is not a tremendous force combating preventable disease while ministering to the victims of disease. It has preached and is preaching the economic waste of the maladies that may be avoided and it is making steady strides in the treatment of curable and incurable diseases. But the longevity theorist who would put the age limit on the Noah and Methuselah basis overlooks the enemies that constantly menace health in the present complex civilization. A much higher order of human beings would have to be on earth to make his plan at all practicable.

An American pathologist recently gave as the enemies of health, "heredity, infection, poison, food deficiency, food excess, fear, grief, emotional excess and psychic apathy due to lack of life interest."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Dead Race.

Eastern museums are sending out calls for cigar store Indians. Obviously the stoic of wood and paint who once faithfully guarded the door of the tobacconist's shop is to be preserved for the admiration of future generations. Our good wishes go with him. We recall many silent moments of delightful awe spent in his presence. There was a time when his tribe was large, with representatives in every city and town of size in the United States. Then—something happened to the race. One by one these ruddy braves began to disappear, until now their kind is practically extinct.

It would be interesting to know just how long the race flourished and who originated the idea, although it is not hard to understand why a wooden Indian was adopted as a symbol of tobacco. It was the Indian who taught his paleface brethren the tobacco habit, just as the white man taught him to drink firewater.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Mistaken Identity.

A young millionaire showed a black eye to a beautiful film star, and said, reproachfully: "Why did you knock me down when I kissed you in the dark conservatory?" "Forgive me, dear one," the beautiful star explained. "I thought it was my husband."

CARELESS DEDUCTIONS

PROHIBITION COMMISSIONER HOLMES who has written his impressions of prohibition as he sees it in operation in the United States is fearful that certain tendencies in American life may mean the fall of America just as certain tendencies of the Romans brought about the fall of Rome.

There is always a danger that one who is interested in a phase of national life will give a partial account of national life and that the prejudices of the writer will lead to the selection of the things that he considers liable to spell the destruction of the nation. Commissioner Holmes is particularly interested in prohibition and he concludes that the tendency that is manifest in this country to wink at the Volstead law may bring about the fall of America. Others who look upon America today are just as sure that the prohibition amendment itself has led to an interference with individual rights that promises the overthrow of the nation through the destruction of individual initiative and choice and the weakening of individual decision.

Those who look at America, without taking into their investigation a bias resulting from either of the attitudes named, will conclude that neither of these positions is justified by the facts, and that many other things are wrong in America that are more likely to spell the destruction of the nation.

Viewing the nation from his particular angle Mr. Holmes says: "There is an observable trend in the direction of lowered and degenerated forms of literature, art and teachings of religion, disguised and nurtured under the cloak of 'modernism'." This is true, but the opponents of prohibition say that these things are caused by prohibition and are not the cause for the laxity of the people towards the eighteenth amendment. Such thinkers claim that the excitement that was produced by liquor is now sought in these degenerated forms of literature, art and religion, and quite recently a writer, who expressed his opinion through a New York paper, claimed that the church had lost itself at the time when it opposed slavery and that its support of the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments indicated a departure of the church from its proper place and function.

It is unfortunate that careless deductions of this kind should be expressed by leaders in large movements for they are so clearly lacking in a proper appreciation of the facts that they carry little weight with intelligent students of history. If "modernism" in the church is to be deplored and constitutes a threat to America's future, by a similar argument those critics may be right who affirm that prohibition was put across through "modernism" in the church and that if America is to be saved the church must cease to interfere with organized life outside of itself and prohibition and other forms of interference must go if America is to survive.

We venture that neither modernism in literature, art or religion led the Minneapolis city council to vote to extend a civic welcome to a man just out of a federal prison, and yet in this decision there lies a graver menace to America than anything to which Commissioner Holmes has pointed. Careless deductions of this kind are exalting to a place of supreme importance matters that are more or less inconsequential while the weightier matters are overlooked. The chief reason for Rome's fall and the chief reason for America's fall, if America is to fall, lies in careless deductions that blind the people or detract their attention from the main issues.

A CLOUD OF WITNESSES

THE Harrow association gave a dinner in honor of Stanley Baldwin the sixth British premier to pass through the school for boys at Harrow-on-the-Hill. While seated at the tables, on an occasion of this kind, memories would be awakened and the imagination would recall what history recounts of the boys who rose to places of leadership in the affairs of the British empire. Memory would recall the broad acres, the ancient buildings, the boys at play, the struggles to win glory for the old school, the challenge to keep inviolate those traditions that cling to such institutions and that subtle and intangible spirit that binds together those who have shared in the life of a school with a history of its own and whose scholars have gone out to make the history of their country.

Probably no loyalty is stronger than that which attaches to the school, whose discipline, traditions and associations made their contributions to the shaping of character, and the man whose life has been influenced by these looks back again and again to find that they constitute a challenge to be true to the spirit of the school. He sees the struggles to bring victory for the school and keep up its traditions, as these were staged out in the open when other schools sought to defeat the "old boys," and the spirit of those struggles begets a will to win in the battles the individual must fight, because he is one of those to whom others look expecting to find that he will be true to the spirit that "carried on" for the glory and renown of the school.

At such times one senses the fact that in some strange and unaccountable manner the past and the present seem to people life's stadium with a crowd of witnesses, who watch the boy of the old day who, as a man, called to a high place, is attempting to do his part in the life of his nation, and he finds in their interest a challenge that calls him to be true to the spirit of the school. The premier of Britain sensed something of this when he said to the Harrovians, later he had taken up what he described as "the heaviest burden in the world," that he took their interest to prove that "you mean by your greeting to assure me that you wish me well, as I know you do, and that, whether I succeed or fail, you have that belief in me that as a son of the Hill I will run straight—I will bear my share of the burden; and if I fail I will not whine—and that if success is mine I shall not be puffed up; but that I will try in all things to follow in the footsteps of those who trod this same difficult path before me, and that I will, with God's help, do nothing in the course of an arduous and difficult career which shall cause any Harrovian to say of me that I have failed to do my best to live up to the highest ideals of the school."

To be true to the past in the present for the future, with the assurance that "the challenge of the past expressed in the present will be more successfully met with the cooperation of those who know the school spirit, is the aim of the man who would be true to the traditions and so live that the record of his life will not dishonor his school and his predecessors who were a part of its life.

BENTALL'S WELCOME AND REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT

JUDGE LANDIS was right when he said that the decision of the Minneapolis city council to give an official welcome to J. O. Bentall upon his return from serving a sentence in Leavenworth represented neither the people of Minneapolis nor the sentiment of the Northwest. The really unfortunate thing is found in the fact that representatives will exercise their votes in such a way that it does not express the viewpoint or the desire of the people they represent. It is interesting that those who voted in this way insist that the people's will should be supreme and that representatives should at all times reflect the will of the people.

For everything there is a reason, and the reason for this vote may be found in the attitude of the conservative, one-hundred per cent Americans, who attempt to prevent radicals from speaking in American cities. So long as those at one pole seek to suppress the speech of the radical element in the country, the radical element in our cities will do just what the Minneapolis city council did. This does not excuse the attitude of the city council; it merely accounts for it. If this vote is an effect, one is led to question whether the cause can be justified. If the country is to be in a continuous turmoil, one side seeking to repress the other, and the side repressed seeking to eulogize those repressed, the turmoil will become unbearable.

It may be confidently affirmed that when there is fair-play on one side there will be a likelihood of fair-play on the other. Closing public buildings to radicals wins this kind of a vote from a radical council and mere denunciation will not affect the situation. The whole trouble lies in the fact that the Constitution confers certain rights upon the people and it does not declare that those who do not agree with the majority are to be silenced by a majority. Bentall did wrong, according to the courts; he has paid the penalty; the war is over, and the spirit of war times should pass out. It must, if America is to be America. The rights of minorities are guaranteed in the Constitution and to prohibit the exercise of these rights is un-American.

LINKING SUMMER RESORTS TO BRAINERD

BRAINERD is not only a gateway to a vast summer resort region of the 10,000 lakes system, but it is also a supply point for these resorts. Of prime importance is the necessity of having good roads so that these tourists may have proper ingress and egress.

A case in point is the Pelican lake region, dotted with summer resorts and cottages, containing the Nebraska colony and many others. They have a road, such as it is, but it must be improved in order to facilitate travel and permit these people as well as the many farmers residing along the route to have a direct road to Brainerd.

The Brainerd Civic & Commerce association has taken up this matter of securing sufficient funds to properly assist in the financing of necessary road improvements. If all interests of the community will assist, the Brainerd Lake Region will be assured of this improvement before this huge trading body gets accustomed to other nearby trade centers instead of Brainerd.

The Civic & Commerce association has to its credit this year the wonderful improvement of the Tourist Park so that the fame of Brainerd in this regard has spread from coast to coast. Another achievement was the entertainment of the Northern Minnesota Editorial association with a five days' program which secured publicity in half a hundred state papers and many out of state publications.

Just as important now is this Pelican road improvement project. It must be accomplished. Brainerd is getting such a wonderful reputation for doing things that the plan must go through. If you think Brainerd isn't enjoying a reputation for being a live town, run your car around in a few states and listen to comments about Brainerd and the lake region.

BRAINERD'S IMPROVEMENTS

DURING the past few years many improvements have been made in the appearance of Brainerd. Some of these have been made by municipal boards, others have been the result of activities of corporations, the Northern Pacific railroad having built a beautiful and commodious depot, while yet other improvements are the work of individuals whose initiative has improved the appearance of the city.

R. R. Wise has, during the past few years, added much to the appearance of the city. The opening of the Ten Thousand Lakes garage directs attention to the work that he has initiated and completed which has had a lot to do with the present improved appearance of Brainerd. He has improved the appearance of certain buildings that were not very pleasing to the passer-by; he looked over lots that had been used for buildings which fires destroyed, and having been impressed by the dejected look of these, he went ahead and built modern buildings on these debris-covered lots.

The improvements made by Mr. Wise, who has built two modern buildings, one over a basement on Seventh street that was nothing more than a hole filled with rubbish, and the other over a similar debris-filled hole in the ground over which a hotel once stood almost opposite the fire station, has done much to redeem the appearance of the most objectionable places in the city. In doing this Mr. Wise has proved his confidence in Brainerd's future and his enterprise ought to be properly appreciated by Brainerd's citizens.

The owner of these new buildings might have decided to retire from the arduous work that such improvements entail, and the fact that he has not done so but has carried forward these schemes at a time in life when other men might have sought to rid themselves of additional responsibility is a matter for congratulation.

Those who "carry on" in this way are not always appreciated as they ought to be. Their activities sometimes arouse adverse criticism in those who cannot bear to see another succeed, and the man who steadily plans and achieves is always before the public eye and anything he does that may be criticized is censured. Such men, however, are doing things while their critics look on or attempt to block the progress of their city.

INCREASE OF PENSIONS FOR CIVIL WAR VETERANS

THE Bursum bill contained certain features that justified the president's veto. In the exercise of his veto President Harding proved that he was ready to do the right thing even though political fortunes might be at stake. He vetoed the bonus bill because congress refused to provide money by which the bonus might be paid, and he refused to sign the Bursum bill that would have increased the pensions of veterans of the civil war because it extended pensions to widows without considering their just title to these.

Both of these measures, or measures of a similar character, will be introduced when congress convenes and remembering the grounds for the president's veto the legislators are likely to steer clear of the defeats of former legislation, that is, if they are sincere in passing such bills.

The American public is ready to give a proper pension to those veterans of the civil war who in their age are struggling to make ends meet on the small pension paid them by the government. The cost of living is considerably higher than it was when the amount of the present pension was fixed and an increase should be made to raise the income of these men to a place where it will afford them a comfortable existence in this age with its higher standard of living and proportionately higher cost of living.

The pressure of the influence of the soldiers of the World war is sufficient to guarantee that they will be rightly treated, for political pressure is very effective in securing legislative enactments favorable to those who can exert it, but in the case of the veterans of the civil war public opinion should influence legislators to raise the pensions to $72 a month as asked in the resolution submitted to the 57th national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. The claims of these veterans should have attention, as the claims of the disabled men of the World war should have consideration, before a bonus is voted for men whose youth and energy is unimpaired.

HELPING the farmers is not as easy as it seems. Congress passed one measure that has stopped buyers buying grain and another that stopped the movement of cattle from Canada to the United States. One of these has reduced the price paid for wheat and the other has taken from the farmers the cattle which if imported would have consumed the farmers' corn. The farmer has reason to fear his friends.

It may be predicted that the senators who went to Europe at Mr. Hearst's expense will come back voicing Mr. Hearst's opinions. Mr. Hearst ought to be invited to send senators over there whose opinions are opposed to his when they leave this side. These would come back with "the truth" as they saw it. In both cases it would be "their truth." Visiting Europe doesn't change minds; it simply confirms opinions.

GARFIELD BROWN, state public examiner, has said things about the irregularity of Eveleth officials. The officials don't like Mr. Brown, and they say that what Mr. Brown says is not true. Somebody must be in the wrong and the people of Eveleth must decide the matter for themselves.

No one talks of making Thomas A. Edison president of the United States, and yet Mr. Edison has done more for America than the auto maker. He is even more eccentric. Both men are great men in their respective lines but both are too eccentric to live in the White House.

ANOTHER candidate seeks the place of boss of Senator-elect Magnus Johnson. He appears too late, for the senator-elect has announced that he has a will of his own. He knows that no man can serve two masters.

AN expert says that the next ice age is approaching. Minnesotans believe this. It comes every winter. But this expert predicts that even Minnesotans will have to become tourists when his ice age comes along.

INGENUITY is present in America where new uses are found for contrivances every day. The latest discovery is that a vacuum cleaner will offer its hospitality to hornets.

IF the railroads are given another year or two to get into shape their critics will be forced to find a new subject to attack.

Are You the Man Who "Never Reads Advertisements?"

Some men, who are neither blind nor illiterate, claim sincerely that they "never read advertisements."

Yet, if you could investigate, in each case you would find that the man who "never reads advertisements" used an advertised tooth paste or shaving cream or soap. If he owns an automobile it will be an advertised car. If you ask his opinion of any automobile he will reply in words that might have been lifted bodily from an advertisement of that automobile.

Advertising has formed his opinions to a great degree. He may have received his information through others who obtained their knowledge from advertising. But it is a fact that no man can escape the effect of advertising even if he does say he "never reads advertisements."

Not one of us ever reasoned out entirely from his own mind that the earth is round. If we had not read it or heard it we would never have known it.

In these days of good, truthful, helpful advertising to say, "I never read advertisements" is merely your way of saying "I don't read all advertisements."

CARELESS DEDUCTIONS

PROHIBITION COMMISSIONER HOLMES who has written his impressions of prohibition as he sees it in operation in the United States is fearful that certain tendencies in American life may mean the fall of America just as certain tendencies of the Romans brought about the fall of Rome.

There is always a danger that one who is interested in a phase of national life will give a partial account of national life and that the prejudices of the writer will lead to the selection of the things that he considers liable to spell the destruction of the nation. Commissioner Holmes is particularly interested in prohibition and he concludes that the tendency that is manifest in this country to wink at the Volstead law may bring about the fall of America. Others who look upon America today are just as sure that the prohibition amendment itself has led to an interference with individual rights that promises the overthrow of the nation through the destruction of individual initiative and choice and the weakening of individual decision.

Those who look at America, without taking into their investigation a bias resulting from either of the attitudes named, will conclude that neither of these positions is justified by the facts, and that many other things are wrong in America that are more likely to spell the destruction of the nation.

Viewing the nation from his particular angle Mr. Holmes says: "There is an observable trend in the direction of lowered and degenerated forms of literature, art and teachings of religion, disguised and nurtured under the cloak of 'modernism'." This is true, but the opponents of prohibition say that these things are caused by prohibition and are not the cause for the laxity of the people towards the eighteenth amendment. Such thinkers claim that the excitation that was produced by liquor is now sought in these degenerated forms of literature, art and religion, and quite recently a writer, who expressed his opinion through a New York paper, claimed that the church had lost itself at the time when it opposed slavery and that its support of the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments indicated a departure of the church from its proper place and function.

It is unfortunate that careless deductions of this kind should be expressed by leaders in large movements for they are so clearly lacking in a proper appreciation of the facts that they carry little weight with intelligent students of history. If "modernism" in the church is to be deplored and constitutes a threat to America's future, by a similar argument those critics may be right who affirm that prohibition was put across through "modernism" in the church and that if America is to be saved the church must cease to interfere with organized life outside of itself and prohibition and other forms of interference must go if America is to survive.

We venture that neither modernism in literature, art or religion led the Minneapolis city council to vote to extend a civic welcome to a man just out of a federal prison, and yet in this decision there lies a graver menace to America than anything to which Commissioner Holmes has pointed. Careless deductions of this kind are exalting to a place of supreme importance matters that are more or less inconsequential while the weightier matters are overlooked. The chief reason for Rome's fall and the chief reason for America's fall, if America is to fall, lies in careless deductions that blind the people or detract their attention from the main issues.

A CLOUD OF WITNESSES

THE Harrow association gave a dinner in honor of Stanley Baldwin the sixth British premier to pass through the school for boys at Harrow-on-the-Hill. While seated at the tables, on an occasion of this kind, memories would be awakened and the imagination would recall what history recounts of the boys who rose to places of leadership in the affairs of the British empire. Memory would recall the broad acres, the ancient buildings, the boys at play, the struggles to win glory for the old school, the challenge to keep inviolate those traditions that cling to such institutions and that subtle and intangible spirit that binds together those who have shared in the life of a school with a history of its own and whose scholars have gone out to make the history of their country.

Probably no loyalty is stronger than that which attaches to the school, whose discipline, traditions and associations made their contributions to the shaping of character, and the man whose life has been influenced by these looks back again and again to find that they constitute a challenge to be true to the spirit of the school. He sees the struggles to bring victory for the school and keep up its traditions, as these were staged out in the open when other schools sought to defeat the "old boys," and the spirit of those struggles begets a will to win in the battles the individual must fight, because he one of those to whom others look expecting to find that he will be true to the spirit that "carried on" for the glory and renown of the school.

At such times one senses the fact that in some strange and unaccountable manner the past and the present seem to people life's stadium with a crowd of witnesses, who watch the boy of the old day who, as a man, called to a high place, is attempting to do his part in the life of his nation, and he finds in their interest a challenge that calls him to be true to the spirit of the school. The premier of Britain sensed something of this when he said to the Harrovians, father he had taken up what he described as "the heaviest burden in the world," that he took their interest to prove that "you mean by your greeting to assure me that you wish me well, as I know you do, and that, whether I succeed or fail, you have that belief in me that as a son of the Hill I will run straight—I will bear my share of the burden; and if I fail I will not whine—and that if success is mine I shall not be puffed up; but that I will try in all things to follow in the footsteps of those who trod this same difficult path before me, and that I will, with God's help, do nothing in the course of an arduous and difficult career which shall cause any Harrovian to say of me that I have failed to do my best to live up to the highest ideals of the school."

To be true to the past in the present for the future, with the assurance that the challenge of the past expressed in the present will be more successfully met with the cooperation of those who know the school spirit, is the aim of the man who would be true to the traditions and so live that the record of his life will not dishonor his school and his predecessors who were a part of its life.

HIBBING IN A ROYAL WELCOME

Reception Accorded the State Convention of Elks Pleased All Brothers and Friends

HAD HUGE LIST OF PRIZES

Ritualistic Contest Cup Won by St. Paul—BRAINERD HAD LARGE Delegation There

BRAINERD Lodge No. 615 of the B. P. O. Elks sent a large delegation to the state convention held at Hibbing, August 16 and 17 and all came back singing the praises of Hibbing as a royal entertainer.

Hibbing lodge fairly outdid itself and set such a pace that it will cause contenders for future conventions to pause and see if they can equal the wealth of pleasure, the hospitality, the huge prize list, the beautiful badges, etc., offered.

Hibbing Daily News

The Hibbing Daily News, under a heading "BRAINERD Delegates Here," said:

"The first of the BRAINERD delegation, BRAINERD 615, to arrive for the Elks convention were Mr. and Mrs. Clyde E. Parker. Mr. Parker is a delegate and chairman of the house, social and community welfare committee of the BRAINERD lodge. The next two cars arriving at 8:35 A. M. Thursday carried the exalted ruler, John A. Hoffbauer, city editor of the BRAINERD Daily Dispatch, J. C. A. Lagerquist, Axel W. Fall, Albert E. Broman, Andrew Smraker, Elie Caron, Oscar Swanson and William Cheeseman."

"BRAINERD expects to have fifty in attendance from its lodge jurisdiction which includes the Cuyuna iron range district, and it is one of the few lodges which is paying the expenses of its delegates in order that the spirit of the Elks association may be promoted by large attendance."

Hibbing Daily Tribune

The Hibbing Daily Tribune, under a heading "BRAINERD Real Boosters," said under "Doings of the Elks."

"BRAINERD Lodge No. 615, with jurisdiction over the whole of the Cuyuna range, was represented by 50 delegates, most of whom came by automobile. In the van of BRAINERD's delegation were Mr. and Mrs. Clyde E. Parker, and directly behind them was Exalted Ruler John A. Hoffbauer, Secretary John J. Cummins, Esteemed Lecturing Knight Walter F. Kunitz, Andrew Smraker and Axel W. Fall."

BRAINERD in the Parade

The big event, as at all Elks conventions, was the parade the last evening. BRAINERD had been assigned a position of honor at the head of the parade, but the brothers turned out largely with cars and so were placed in the decorated car division leading Hibbing lodge.

The convention committee got a large truck, decorated it with banners secured in BRAINERD carrying the legend, "BRAINERD, Gateway to the 10,000 Lakes Association," and "BRAINERD 615, Cuyuna Range says Hello Bill to Big Brother of Mesaba Range" and "BRAINERD 615."

Bunting was swathed about the truck. A piano was rented and a Hibbing girl, very charming and an unusually accomplished musician, Miss Dora Aubin, niece of Oscar Aubin, secretary of Hibbing lodge, played the instrument. Three pretty girl chums sang. The exalted ruler rented a violin and played.

Hibbing girls are all pretty and most attractive and BRAINERD lodge members all made a drive to get on the truck. With the girls as an inspiration, some members sang who never before revealed they had such vocal accomplishment. The stock of songs included one extolling the merits of BRAINERD as being a good town, "Hall, Hall the Gang's All Here," "Barney Google," "Yes, We Have No Bananas" and several songs in which the girls featured.

In spite of a drum corps ahead and a brass band to the rear, BRAINERD's close harmony warbled out and spilled along the sides. The 10,000 lakes idea was further exemplified by an Elk with pole, line and balloon fishing from the rear and sides. Noisemakers were used, and the hats worn were regular straw, fishermen hats with cards stitched in them carrying the label "BRAINERD 615 B. P. O. E." Hats and noisemakers were distributed among the crowds when the parade was over.

Cars driven by Andrew Smraker, John J. Cummins, Axel W. Fall, Walter F. Kunitz, Charles Stadbauer, Clyde E. Parker also carried signs referring to BRAINERD 615, the 10,000 Lakes and the Cuyuna iron range.

BRAINERD May Get Convention

Considerable sentiment was aroused for BRAINERD as a convention city.

Elks had read and heard about the hospitality shown the Northern Minnesota Editorial Association. At the state association meeting action on selection of the convention city was referred to the executive committee. Later W. W. Koons of St. Cloud reported Duluth had made a bid and it was accepted as the 1924 meeting place, and BRAINERD now enters the lists for the 1925 convention.

The way BRAINERD will handle the convention is to get the summer resorts, the Cuyuna iron range and BRAINERD linked up, dividing the hotel patronage, and entertaining three days with a stayover for Sunday fishing. With these three interests backing the convention, it can be put across and Elks were certain, that BRAINERD's ideal location, center of the state, easily reached by railway and by the wonderful highways of the state, will mass one of the largest conventions in the history of the order.

It was hot, scorching hot, the crowd of pedestrians whose feet sank into the softened asphalt and the surge of autoists who breathed the hot dry air, knew. It was noon, the perspiring traffic cop, laboring frantically to direct this mass, also knew. Then in the midst of the crowd, caught in the stream of traffic going both ways, appeared a dirty-faced, barefooted newsboy. It was hot, too hot even for those toughened feet. The newsboy danced rapidly from one burning foot to the other. But traffic was slow in passing. For what seemed an endless period the youngster kept going up and down. Finally he threw his cap on the pavement, planted himself safely on it and, arms akimbo, awaited his turn to move.

The Kuehmichel car, a Ford roadster, was badly demolished. The Ryan car suffered only a broken fender, it is stated. No one was hurt.

Mass Attack on Patient.

An interesting experiment which may mark a new era in the history of medical treatment, is being tried at 83 Brook street, W. In view of its experimental nature, publicity was not sought but the venture is too interesting to hide, in the opinion of a London Answers writer.

The scheme is to secure the advantages of a board of medical experts in one house, where patients may be examined and have a diagnosis of the whole board's opinion. That is to say, they do not depend upon the opinion of one man, but have their cases discussed after their visit by fourteen specialists, representing various branches of the medical profession.

When the patient's trouble has been diagnosed a report is sent to the patient's family doctor, with advice as to treatment.

The waiting room of this miniature Harley street is a cheerful room, the walls and curtains being pale primrose, the carpet a warm gray, and the furniture carried out the blue brocade. Old copies of "Punch" are barred. Thus the trembling patient goes to his consultation in a spirit of good cheer.

Here's Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Faded Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. adv't

Harnessing Turbulent River.

The Yellow river, China's most treacherous waterway, which caused incalculable damage when it broke its banks two years ago and made a new channel, is to be returned to its original course. Fourteen thousand laborers are engaged in the building of dykes, and it is expected soon to increase the number to 20,000. The executive secretary of the China International famine relief commission estimated the cost of corraling the Yellow river at $1,500,000, Chinese currency, of which sum the finance commission of the government relief bureau has provided $300,000. Hundreds of square miles of territory north of the old river bed in the vicinity of Kung Chia Pa was flooded during the spring of 1921 by the breaking of a dyke and thousands of families were made homeless. Since then the district has been only sparsely repopulated, due to the fear of a recurrence of the catastrophe.

HIBBING IN A ROYAL WELCOME

Reception Accorded the State Convention of Elks Pleased All Brothers and Friends

HAD HUGE LIST OF PRIZES

Ritualistic Contest Cup Won by St. Paul—Brainerd Had Large Delegation There

Brainerd Lodge No. 615 of the B. P. O. Elks sent a large delegation to the state convention held at Hibbing August 16 and 17 and all came back singing the praises of Hibbing as a royal entertainer.

Hibbing lodge fairly outdid itself and set such a pace that it will cause contenders for future conventions to pause and see if they can equal the wealth of pleasure, the hospitality, the huge prize list, the beautiful badges, etc., offered.

Hibbing Daily News

The Hibbing Daily News, under a heading "Brainerd Delegates Here," said:

"The first of the Brainerd delegation, Brainerd 615, to arrive for the Elks convention were Mr. and Mrs. Clyde E. Parker. Mr. Parker is a delegate and chairman of the house, social and community welfare committee of the Brainerd lodge. The next two cars arriving at 8:35 A. M. Thursday carried the exalted ruler, John A. Hoffbauer, city editor of the Brainerd Daily Dispatch, J. C. A. Lagerquist, Axel W. Fall, Albert E. Broman, Andrew Smraker, Elie Caron, Oscar Swanson and William Cheeseman."

"Brainerd expects to have fifty in attendance from its lodge jurisdiction which includes the Cuyuna iron range district, and it is one of the few lodges which is paying the expenses of its delegates in order that the spirit of the Elks association may be promoted by large attendance."

Hibbing Daily Tribune

The Hibbing Daily Tribune, under a heading "Brainerd Real Boosters," said under "Doings of the Elks."

"Brainerd Lodge No. 615, with jurisdiction over the whole of the Cuyuna range, was represented by 50 delegates, most of whom came by automobile. In the van of Brainerd's delegation were Mr. and Mrs. Clyde E. Parker, and directly behind them was Exalted Ruler John A. Hoffbauer, Secretary John J. Cummins, Esteemed Lecturing Knight Walter F. Kunitz, Andrew Smraker and Axel W. Fall."

Brainerd in the Parade

The big event, as at all Elks conventions, was the parade the last evening. Brainerd had been assigned a position of honor at the head of the parade, but the brothers turned out largely with cars and so were placed in the decorated car division leading Hibbing lodge.

The convention committee got a large truck, decorated it with banners secured in Brainerd carrying the legend, "Brainerd, Gateway to the 10,000 Lakes Association," and "Brainerd 615, Cuyuna Range says Hello Bill to Big Brother of Mesaba Range" and "Brainerd 615."

Bunting was swathed about the truck. A piano was rented and a Hibbing girl, very charming and an unusually accomplished musician, Miss Dora Aubin, niece of Oscar Aubin, secretary of Hibbing lodge, played the instrument. Three pretty girl chums sang. The exalted ruler rented a violin and played.

MONEY NEEDED FOR U. S. OLYMPIC TEAM

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

New York, Aug. 20.—Regarding the transportation to Paris next summer of the athletes, who are to represent the United States in the Olympics, and the care of the stars who are to carry the American shield into action, the American Olympic committee has the following to say:

"The chartering of the S. S. America solved the transportation problem; the chartering of Prince Murat's chateau solved the housing problem—there is still one big problem to be solved—that is the financial problem.

"You can assist in solving this problem by sending in your contribution immediately to Julius H. Barnes, treasurer of the American Olympic committee, 305 Broadway, New York City."

No more emphasis can be added to this appeal for public support in helping the committee finance the trip of the American athletes to Paris. England has been raising funds for almost a year to defray the expenses of sending a team to represent the British Isles. Other European countries have secured funds, and the American team will be given sufficient financial backing if the public is made to realize that it has just as much a chance to help the cause as the athletes who make the trip and engage in the actual competition.

There is no question that the money will be well spent and that it will be handled by honest and competent men. The ordinary layman has no idea what it costs to select, mobilize, transport, train and keep a team of two or three hundred athletes in condition to compete in the games. The cost of transportation alone is a staggering sum and the expense of maintenance is equally as great.

Some money has been raised by the committee through individual subscriptions and through the assessment levied on the receipts of track and field meets conducted by clubs affiliated with the Amateur Athletic Union, but in comparison with the amount needed it is rather a trifling sum.

Perhaps it will be recalled that there were many things attending the last trip to Antwerp that caused dissatisfaction among the athletes and brought just criticism upon the committee in charge of the trip.

But it is not fair to hold that against the committee appointed to conduct the next foreign invasion. It must be remembered that many post-war obstacles were encountered in taking the team to Antwerp and that the committee was sort of out of practice.

There is sure to be no repetition of the discomforts that the 1920 team experienced on its trip to Belgium and during its stay in Antwerp.

LEAR'S ATTORNEY DEFIES HICKEY TO "DO HIS WORST"

Milwaukee, Aug. 20.—In a statement issued here today, Raymond J. Cannon, attorney for Fred "King" Lear, former Milwaukee second baseman, who jumped his contract to play with the Kenosha-Nash Motors of the Midwest league, issued a challenge to President Hickey of the American Association to "do his worst."

"If Mr. Hickey desires a battle," Cannon said, "he certainly will get one. Organized baseball has been getting by with a great many things with the American baseball public of late and it is about time the ball players' position is properly and honestly put before the public."

Cannon denounced the baseball magnates as a powerful financial body who have for some time past been deceiving, cheating and defrauding the ball player out of his rights and interests.

He classed the conditions under which the players are compelled to perform their services today as "worse than the laboring conditions have ever been in darkest Russia."

"We are ready to meet Mr. Hickey and all the injunction suits he is able to have judges in the Wisconsin courts sign. He will find out that in the final analysis that the law is nothing but common sense and that when common sense is the judge between the ball player and the club owner in organized baseball, the decision will be in favor of the ball player."

New Net Champ Was Coached by Dad Until She Became Too Good

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Miss Helen Wills, the new American tennis champion is a "native daughter" of California. She is the only child of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Wills of Berkeley, and was born there on Oct. 6, 1905. She was taught the game by her father and she played with him until, in the words of her mother:

"Her dad had no chance with her. There were few good girl players of her age and she was forced to play with boys against whom she developed a very virile, powerful game.

William M. Johnston, America's second best player, was the real producer of the California girl's game. What she did not pick up from his actual coaching, she acquired thru the study of his game.

She graduated from Berkeley high school last June and is going to pursue her studies in the fall as a freshman at the University of California.

If You Know How Old Anne Is You Have a Chance With Joe Cantillon

Minneapolis, Aug. 20.—"There's nothing to this report that I am ashamed of my age," announced Pongo Cantillon yesterday when interviewed on the subject of his birthday. "I was born on the 19th of August in Janesville, Wis., at three o'clock in the morning and baptized on the first of September the same year and the records are all there to prove it. What more do you want than that?"

"Fine, Joe, but what year," he was asked.

"Now listen," Joe exploded, "didn't I tell you August 19, in Janesville, Wisconsin, at 3 o'clock in the morning? If you were a gentleman you'd be satisfied with that, instead of asking about my birthmarks, my first remarks and my childhood ailments."

"But what year?"

"Well, I didn't fight in the civil war, but I've been in professional baseball for 40 years. When I started the batter could call for the kind of ball he wanted—high or low. If he called for a high ball it had to be between the belt and the shoulders and if he called—

Now how are you going to find out how old Joe is unless you have access to the records of the little church on Janesville's main street where the reverend father sprinkled the baptismal water over his even then bantam-some countenance and announced to the world that Joseph Napoleon Cantillon was ready to take his turn at bat?

Within the last decade has occurred the return of the earring so long laid aside. Few seen today, however, surpass in taste and delicate finish the earrings of Biote, the daughter of Aristotle, which were found in Chalcis, where the young woman was buried.

These ornaments represented doves swinging in golden hoops. The miniature birds were marvelously wrought, the feathers of granulated gold, the wings and breasts enriched with bands of color supplied by inserted gems. Precious stones gleamed like tiny sparks for the eyes.

Daintiest of all, the tail feathers were so finely made and curiously adjusted as to move at the slightest motion of the pendant loop, so that whenever the proud wearer should toss or shake her head two attendant doves would seem to balance themselves upon their perches as live birds do in swinging on a bough.

MONEY NEEDED FOR U. S. OLYMPIC TEAM

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

New York, Aug. 20.—Regarding the transportation to Paris next summer of the athletes, who are to represent the United States in the Olympics, and the care of the stars who are to carry the American shield into action, the American Olympic committee has the following to say:

"The chartering of the S. S. America solved the transportation problem; the chartering of Prince Murat's chateau solved the housing problem—there is still one big problem to be solved—that is the financial problem.

"You can assist in solving this problem by sending in your contribution immediately to Julius H. Barnes, treasurer of the American Olympic committee, 305 Broadway, New York City."

No more emphasis can be added to this appeal for public support in helping the committee finance the trip of the American athletes to Paris. England has been raising funds for almost a year to defray the expenses of sending a team to represent the British Isles. Other European countries have secured funds, and the American team will be given sufficient financial backing if the public is made to realize that it has just as much a chance to help the cause as the athletes who make the trip and engage in the actual competition.

There is no question that the money will be well spent and that it will be handled by honest and competent men. The ordinary layman has no idea what it costs to select, mobilize, transport, train and keep a team of two or three hundred athletes in condition to compete in the games. The cost of transportation alone is a staggering sum and the expense of maintenance is equally as great.

Some money has been raised by the committee through individual subscriptions and through the assessment levied on the receipts of track and field meets conducted by clubs affiliated with the Amateur Athletic Union, but in comparison with the amount needed it is rather a trifling sum.

Perhaps it will be recalled that there were many things attending the last trip to Antwerp that caused dissatisfaction among the athletes and brought just criticism upon the committee in charge of the trip.

But it is not fair to hold that against the committee appointed to conduct the next foreign invasion. It must be remembered that many post-war obstacles were encountered in taking the team to Antwerp and that the committee was sort of out of practice.

There is sure to be no repetition of the discomforts that the 1920 team experienced on its trip to Belgium and during its stay in Antwerp.
